

my pen will work a little more agreeably than it has.

Margaret just called me as she had gone to Phila. with John and Amy, and I'd told her to report in when they got home. Since she was licked when she got there last night, she called this morning, and I told her you had wondered about Veena and Lois. To show once more how my pieces fit in the jig-saw puzzle, she is going to Veena's today and will let both her and Lois know, so that is another hurdle you don't need to leap.

Then I called Mrs. Prince who had hat and coat on, just ready to go out the door, and asked if she knows of Mary Thomas. She thinks Mary is in a rest home, but, if she remembers, will find out from Anne Muldoon when their schedules meet, where the home is. Now you must give me more than a zero rating, even if I get lost between here and town. Sincerely Edith
